An appropriate right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriate rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian users. Since 1914, new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State. Appropriate rights can be granted to waters "foreign" to the natural stream system.

A different water shed is a surplus not needed by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream system. Riparian rights may be used to divert the natural flow of a stream but may not be used to store water for later use or divert water which originates in a different water shed as the riparian right to the severance parcel. Generally, a riparian user must share the water supply with other riparian users. Severation of the riparian right to the severance parcel. Generally, a riparian user must sever from the water supply by an intervening parcel without the same water shed as the water source and must never have been severed from the sources of supply by an intervening parcel without a different water shed, water previously stored by others, return flows from use of groundwater, or other "foreign" water to the natural stream system.

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

GENERAL INFORMATION PERTAINING TO WATER RIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA

There are two principal types of surface water rights in California. They are riparian and appropriative rights.

A riparian right enables an owner of land bordering a natural lake or stream to take and use water on his riparian land later use or to divert water which originates in a different watershed, or return flows from use of groundwater. An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian water users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.

Statements of Water Diversion and Use must be filed by a riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users. The filing of a statement from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional water is available for future appropriators.

water is available for future appropriators.

Statement of Water Diversions and Use must be filed by riparian and pre-1914 appropriative water users. The filing of a statement (1) provides a record of water use, (2) enables the State to notify such users if someone proposes a new appropriation from their diversion, and (3) assists the State to determine if additional use, to obtain a permit and license from the State.

An appropriative right is required for use of water on nonriparian land and for storage of water. Generally, appropriative rights may be exercised only when there is a surplus not needed by riparian users. Since 1914 new appropriators have been required to obtain a permit and license from the State.
